The Sunny Mango

The mango was big and bright, coloured like a mix of yellow and orange. It felt firm and a little bumpy in my hand. I smelled it, and a wonderfully sweet, juicy scent floated up to my nose. When I took a bite, it made a soft, squishy sound. The taste was super sweet and syrupy, like honey mixed with sunshine. The smooth fruit was a perfect, delicious treat.

A Forest Morning

The sun peeked through the trees turning the leaves a bright green. A gentle breeze made the tall grass whisper a soft, rustling sound. The air smelled clean and cool like wet earth. If you stepped off the path, the soft ground felt springy and damp under your feet. There was no taste, just the feeling of fresh, cool air filling your mouth with every breath.
